stated for THE WORLD by J. C. Curtin. 1

Y name is Louis Bobieu. I am seventy vears of age. I was born in the village of Saint-Jory, a few league from Toulouse, up the Garonne.

> For fourteen years I struggled with the soil to earn my bread, Comfort finally came, and last month I found myself the richest farmer in the neighborhood.

Our house seemed blessed. Happiness dwelt within it. The sun was a brother to us and I do not recollect a single bad harvest, There were nearly a dozen of us on the farm our past privations. Jacques was right. I in those happy days; myself, still buoyant must indeed have won the favor of some and merry, accompanying the children to saint on high, or of the Almighty himself, for work; my younger brother, Pierre, an old we were the luckiest of all the people around bachelor, and formerly a sergeant in the us. When a hail storm came it stopped just army; and my sister Agathe, who lived with at the boundary of our fields. If our neighus since her husband's death, a portly and bor's vineyards were blighted ours seemed to cheerful woman whose laugh could be heard to the other end of the village.

Then came the rest of the brood : my son Jacques, his wife Rose, and their three daughters, Aimee, Veronique, Marie. The first was married to Cyprien Bouisson, a tall and goodnatured man, by whom she had two children, the one two years and the other ten months old. The second had lately been betrothed to Gaspard Rabuteau; and the third was so comely and accomplished that she would pass for a city belle. This made ten in all.

I was not only a grandfather, but a greatgrandfather. When we were at table I had my sister Agathe seated at my right, my brother Pierre at my left, while the children completed the circle, being ranged according to their ages, a row of heads gradually growing smaller, down to the ten-months-old baby, who was already eating soup like a

And when they began the meal, what a rattle of spoons in the plates! The brood were hearty eaters. And what fun and jollity between each mouthful! What a glow of pride and joy I felt run through my veins when the little hands reached out to me. Grandpa, some more bread, please; a big piece, grandpa,"

Ah! those happy days! Our busy household was vocal with somes of joy. Pierre in the evenings invented games and related stories of his campaigns.

On Sunday Aunt Agathe made shuffleboards for the girls. Then there were more

S

Z

Ш

NSUR

MORAL:

riage. We did not like to leave the old homestead. We would rather have built a village in the garden behind the house. When families agree it is so pleasant to live and die where one has grown up. The month of May had been unusually fine this year. For a long time there had not been such a promise of an abundant harvest. One day I took a walk around my farm with my son Jacques. We started about 3 o'clock. Our meadows on the banks of the Garonne spread out clad in the brightest green; the grass was three feet high, and a willow planted a year before was already putting forth its

We then visited our grain crops and vineyards-fields purchased year by year according as our wealth increased. The wheat fields and vineyards were in full bloom and gave promise of a splendid yield.

Tapping me on the shoulder, Jacques burst into a joyous laugh, as he exclaimed: ' Well, father, we shall want for bread and wine no more. You have surely won the favor of the Almighty, when he pours down such blessings on your lands."

We often joked pleasantly in referring to be surrounded by a wall of protection.

In the end I came to imagine that this was only just. Having never injured any one, I began to feel that this happiness was my due. Returning home we crossed some land that we owned on the other side of the village. Some mulberry plantations were thriving

Some mulberry plantations were thriving admirably and some almond trees were in full bloom. When we should have money enough to spare we would purchase the intervening fields, and so connect and round off all our lands.

Chatting gayly as we went concerning our good luck, we soon reached home. One of our cows had added to the number of our stock while we were away. Everybody rushed out to see the new arrival. Aunt Agathe hurried forward despite her portly form. The children gazed at the little visitor curiously. And we all thought that this little creature's coming was another added blessing. We had lately enlarged the stables, that now housed about 100 head of cattle, besides a large number of sheep and horses. "Come," I exclaimed, "this is a lucky day. We will open a bottle of old wine on the head of it."

Just then Rose took us aside to tell us that

We will open a bottle of old wine on the head of it."

Just then Rose took us aside to tell us that Gaspard, Veronique's betrothed, had come to decide on the wedding day. She had kept him for dinner. Gaspard, the eldest son of a farmer of Moranges, was a tall youth of some twenty years, and known throughout that portion of the country for his prodigious strength. At a fete in Toulouse he vanquished Martial, the Lion of the South. But for all that he was as retiring and bashful as a child, and blushed every time Veronique looked him straight in the face.

I told Rose to call him, as he was in the yard helping the servants to hang out some clothes after a big wash.

When he entered the dining-room, where we were sitting, Jacques turned towards me and said: "Speak, father."

"Very well," I answered. "So you have come, my boy, to fix on the great day?"

THE FUGITIVES STILL DASHED WILDLY ALONG THE ROAD.

we would have to add another after the marriage of Veronique and Gaspard, so that the house would end by touching the skies, if we were to continue adding to it at every mar
When he entered the dining-room, where we were sitting, Jacques turned towards me sitting, Jacques turned towards me we were sitting, Jacques turned towards me we were sitting, Jacques turned towards me sitting, Jacques turne then he embraced Rose, calling her mother.

This stalwart youth with the formidable the first loved Veronique more dearly than his life, and he often told us if we refused her his life, and he often told us if we refused her his life, and he often told us if we refused her his life, and he often told us if we refused her his life, and he often told us if we refused her his life, and he often told us if we refused her his life, and he often told us if we refused her his life, and he often told us if we refused her his life, and he often told us if we refused her him he would never survive it.

"Now, then." I replied, ahrunging my shoulders, that will amount to nothing. It is the same the thin he would never rises in its fury, sweeps wildly along, and then, subsiding in a sweeping. Gaspard had been placed beside veronique, and he used to sit looking at her between times, quite forgetful of his plate, and so happy in being near her that every few moments the tears welled into his eyes. Yourneam the told us if we refused her well and flows on innocently as a lamb. You will see, my boy, that we will laugh at all this evening." With a wave of my hand I pointed to the see, my boy, that we will laugh at all this by and by. Look, there never was a more between times, quite forgetful of his plate, and so happy in being near her that evening." With a wave of my hand I pointed to the sum of the work of my by and by. Look, there never was a more between times, quite forgetful of his plate, and so happy in being near her that evening." With a wave of my hand I pointed to the sum of the work of my hand I pointed to the sum of the work of my hand I seen the sum of the hourney. With a wave of my hand I seen the sum of the hourney of the went of the hourney of the carrier and so happy in being near her that evening." With a wave of my hand I seen the sum of the hourney of the hourn seemed to envelop us with the adieu of the dying day.

I returned to the company in the room. The girls were laughing merrily. We were smiling at their innocent pleasantry, when all at once, amid the quiet scene without, a terrible cry resounded in our cars:

"The Garonne! The Garonne!"

We rushed out precipitately and looked in the direction from whence the cry came. In the distance we beheld two men and three women, one of whom was carrying an infant in her arms, rushing madly over the rough road. Now and then they turned to look behind them, with terrified faces, as if pursued by a pack of wolves.

"What in the world is the matter?" asked Cyprien. "Can you see anything, grandpa?"

"No, no," I answered. "The leaves do not even stir."

In fact, the entire country to the furthest boundary of the horizon was as calm and peaceful as usual. But I had scarce ceased speaking when an exclamation burst from us all. Behind the fugitives, among the groves of poplars, in the midst of the tall herbage, we suddenly saw what appeared to be a huge mass of grayish and spotted wild beasts advancing with an appalling roar. From every side they came, wave chasing wave, in galloping confusion, a mass of foaming waters, seething, boiling, flinging their white crests in the air and shaking the earth in their furious onset.

We in our turn now uttered the despairing

We in our turn now uttered the despairing cry: "The Garonne! The Garonne!"
The fugitives still dashed wildly along the road. They could hear the rushing waters gaining on them at every stride. The waves now advanced in one long, serried line, tumbling and crashing like the thunderous din of an army cleans with the enemy now advanced in one long, serried line, tumbling and crashing like the thunderous din of an army closing with the enemy. Under the first shock three poplars were snapped to pieces, their tall foliage sinking and disappearing in the foamy waters. A boarded hut was engulfed; a wall crumbled to pieces, and carts and wagons were swept away lik wisps of straw.

But the waters seemed above all to pursue the fugitives. At a turn of the road, where the ground was low, the waves suddenly rushed in, forming a vast sheet of water and completely cutting off all retreat. Still the frightened group dashed on, splashing through the rising sea with giant strides, but no longer shrieking, although mad with terror. The waters had reached their knees. A huge wave now flung itself on the woman who was carrying the baby. Both were swallowed in an instant.

"Quick! quick!" I cried. "We must get into the house—it is solidly built, and we have nothing to fear."

But prudence soon compelled us to seek refuge in the second story. We made the girlsgo up first. I insisted on going up last myself. The house was built on a hillock that overlooked the road. The water now overspread the courtyard and continued to rise. But we were not much alarmed.

"Bah!" exclaimed Jacques, to reassure the little company, "it will be nothing, after all. You remember, fatlier, how some years ago the water overflowed the courtyard just like this. It rose a foot and gradually subsided."

"Still, it will be very hard for the crops,"

"Still, it will be very hard for the crops," muttered Cyprien.

"No, no, it will amount to nothing," I replied, on seeing the tearful, beseeching eyes of the women. Aimee had put her two children to bed, and, in company with Veronique and Marie, was seated beside the pillow. Aunt Agathe talked of mulling some wine that she had brought up to revive our drooping courage. Jacques and Rose were standing together looking out of the window. I was at the other window, with my brother, Cyprien and Gaspard.

"Come up," I called to the two servants who were splashing about in the yard. "Do not stay down there to be all wet."

"But the cattle," they cried, "are frightened, and will kill themselves in their stalls."

"No, no; come up at once. We'll see to the cattle by and by."

The rescue of the cattle was impossible should the disaster continue to increase. Still, I thought it useless to add to the fears of the company. I even forced myself to appear in the best of spirits. With my elbow leaning on the window sill, I chatted and pointed out the progress of the flood.

The river, after its first assault on the village, flooded every street and lane. It was no longer a charge of dashing waves, but a slow and irresistible suffocation. The hollow in which Saint-Jory lav was now a vast lake. The water in our yard was over three feet deep. I saw it slowly rise, but I insisted that it remained standing, and I even went so far as to argue that it was subsiding.

"You will be compelled to stay here all night, my boy," I said, turning to Gaspard. "But the roads may be dry again in a few hours' time." He looked at me without making any reply, his face deadly pale. I afterwards saw him fix his eyes on Veronique with a look of inexpressible anguish.

(To be Continued To-Morrow.)

(To be Continued To-Morrow,)

AMUSEMENTS.

Union SQUARE THEATRE. GRAND TESTIMONIAL

Miss SARAH JEWETT. THURSDAY AFTERNOON, 2 o'clock, Dec. 15, on which occasion will be produced for the first time, A SAD COQUETTE.

Ry Miss ESTELLE CLAYTON.
WITH THE FOLLOWING STRONG CAST:
Miss LENORE. Miss ESTELLE CLAYTO
Miss HIGGINS. Miss SKLINA FULLE
Miss MERRITT Miss LOUISA ELDRIDG
LITTLE BOBBY Mrs. LOUISA ELDRIDG
LITTLE BOBBY Mr. EBEN FLYMPTO LITTLE BOBBY LATTLE GLAU
PAUL MORTIMER Mr. RBEN PLYMPYOD
LORD LAWYON Mr. GRORGE HOLLANI
SIR CHARLES LAWYON Mr. FAVERRHAM
PREDPRICK WEST Mr. STODDARI

UNION SQUARE THEATRE J. M. HILL, Manager ROBSON AND CRANE
under the management of J. M. Hill and Joseph Brooks, in the great American Comedy,
THE HENRIETTA.
by Bronson Howard.
Evenings at S. 15. Saturday Matines at 2. Carriages,
10.45. Seats secured two weeks in advance.

METROPOLITAN OPERA-HOUSE,
Dider the personal direction of Mr. HENRY E. ABBEY.
Tues., Dec. 13, at 8, 18, Thurs., Dec. 16, at 3, 90° clock.

JOSEF HOFMANN, scompanied by Mme. RELEAR HASTREITER, Prima Denna Cuntraito; Theo. Bjorksten, Tenor; Ng. De An-na, Baritons; Miss Nettic Carpenter, Violiniste; Mme. Ferrari, Accompanist; Mme. Sacconi, Harpist, and Adolph Neumdorff's Orand Ornbestra. Seats now on sale. Weber Grand Plane used.

DOCKSTADER'S MINSTREES st, and Broadway. Nightly, 8.30; B t, Mat., 2.1 BEATS IN ADVANCE. NO EXTRA. Our new and laughable burlesque.

JOSEP HOFMANN'S SISTER. FRANK HOWARD, greatest ballad singer, in a new song, entitled 'ONLY A BLUE BRILL.'
Dockstader in a new song and specialty,
Last week of 'Black Faust' and Musical Hiftings.

HARRIGAN'S PARK THEATRE.

EDWARD HARRIGAN

M. WHARLEY
INCONTROVERTIBLE SUCCESS OF MANAGER
INCONTROVERTIBLE SUCCESS OF MANAGER
GREAT AND ORIGINAL CHARACTER ACTING OF

DAVE HAHAM and his Popular Orohostra.

Wednesday—Matines—Saturday.

DEN MUSEE, 23D ST., BET. STH & 6TH AVES. ERDELY NACZI and his HUNGARIAN ORCHENTRA.

Concerts from 3 to 5 and 8 to 11.
Admission to all, 50 cents; children 25 cents.
AJEEB—The shythying Chess Automaton.
(IRAND OPERA-HOUSE.
Reserved seats, orchestra, girela and the shythying chess automaton.

Reserved easts, orchestra, circle and balcony, 500.
d. MRS. LANCTRY Sat.
in "AB IN A LOOKING-GLASS."
Next Sunday—PROF. GROW WELL'S lecture,
"San Francisco and the Fax Wort,"

SUCCESS OF ELAINE.

Mail and Express .- "An unequivocal success,"
SEATS HESERVED 3 WEEKS IN ADVANCE. BINO. BROADWAY AND 197H ST.
Evenings at 8. Matines, Saturday at 2.
THE JOILLEST OF ALL COMIC OPERAS, MADRION.

FUFTH AVE. THEATRE.
EVENINGS AT S. MATINEE SATURDAY AT 2.
HOYT'S LATEST COMEDY SATIRE, A HOLE IN THE GROUND.

. Monday, Dec. 19-MR. RICHARD MANSFIELD.

FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE, MONDAY NEXT,

MANSFIELD
In his own comedy MONSIEUR.
Seate may now be secured. Seats may now be secured.

14 TH STREET THEATRE-OOE, SIXTH AVE.

Astiness Wednesdays and Saturdays.
POSITIVELY LAST TWO WERNS OF

DEL MAN THOMPSOND.

Gallery, 25c. Reserved, 35c., 65c., 75c., $1, $1.50.

THIRD WERK, THIRD WHEE,

SHE "

Matinese Wednesday and Saturday.

TONY PASTOR'S THEATRE, 14TH STREET.

TONY PASTOR'S GREAT SHOW.

ANDY AND ANNIE HUGHES—ALBERT GLIVES.

They are, and we guarantee them to be, every one the very finest ENGLISH AND SCOTCH SUITINGS imported.

They are the LATEST DESIGNS of this depsen's imperiations, and were made especially for the MOST EXCLUSIVE TAILORING TRADE.

We will give samples and invite comparise in style and quality with the BEST and HIGH-EST-PRICED SUITING in any morehant tailoring establishment in New York or cise-

We have about ONE HUNDERD AND FIFTY DIFFERENT STYLES of these goods

TWENTY DOLLARS

we will make to YOUM ORDER as good a SUIT OF CLOTHES as would cost in a regular way Fifty Dollars. This is a SPECIAL SALE, and never in the history of our business have we been able to offer so MUCH for so LITTLE; in other words, it is really a $50 SUIT FOR $20.

GEO. A. CASTOR & CO., TAILORS.

> BROADWAY AND 18TH ST. ALSO 267 BROADWAY, Opposite City Hall Park.

FOR SALE. EMBROIDERED TOILET SETS, half price the week; also something new. 923 Broadway, ross 4, elevator.

AMUSEMENTS. H. R. JACOBS'S 3D AVE. THEATRE,

80c. 50c.

WALLACK'S.

Rose Cognan.

A Cabe. THE LAST WEEK.
50c. ARABIAN NIGHTS.
75c. MATINE TO-MGRROW.
$1. Dec. 26, BOOTH AND BARRETT. BLJOU O'PERAHOUSE.
CORRAIR.

BICE'S BURLESQUE COMPANY.
65 artists in Rice & Dixer's emprisones production of
THE CORRAIR.

Evenings at 6. Mass Wed. Sec. at 2. POOLE'S THEATRE. STH ST. AND 4TH AVE.

JOHN HAZELRIGG as DICK COULTER. STAR THEATRE. JULIA MARLOWE.

Supported by Mr. JOSEPH BLWORTH.

THIS (TUESDAY) EVENTING INCOMAR.

Dec. 19, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Florence.

A RMORY HALL VAUDEVILLE THRATER.
198 and 180 Heeter st.
First-Class Variety Company. Constant change of

AT THIS SEASON OF THE YEAR PREPARE FOR THE DANGERS OF WINTER.

INSURE IN

COMPANY, THE TRAVELERS INSURANCE OF HARTFORD, CONN.

RODNEY DENNIS. Secretary.

JAS. G. BATTERSON, President.

The Largest Life and Accident Insurance Company in the World.

All desirable forms of Life and Accident Policies issued Immediately on application. All claims paid without Discount immediately on receipt of satisfactory proofs.

THE MOST LIBERAL POLICIES ISSUED BY ANY

140 BROADWAY NEW YORK OFFICE

M. JOHNSON, General Agent.

AGENTS AND BROKERS WILL FIND IT TO THEIR ADVANTAGE TO PLACE BUSINESS WHERE THE PAYMENT OF CLAIMS IS PROMPT AND CERTAIN!

INSURE Z  $\dashv$ RAVELERS